ABOUT ROME

Rome is the capital of Italy and the administrative centre of Lazio Region. The city area consists of flat ground with low hills, on either side of the river Tiber. Rome can boast an unsurpassed artistic heritage. The city has the largest number of UNESCO World Heritage sites, including the historical centre, the Basilica of St Paul's within the Walls, and the Aurelian Walls. As the heart of Catholic Christianity, Rome is the only city in the world to incorporate another state within its boundaries – the Vatican City. For this reason, it is often called the capital of two countries.
